City Begins Annexation

by Bill Rowland

As can be seen in a large City of Greenbelt advertisement elsewhere in this issue, the legal process has been put into motion to make the city itself significantly larger. The city council, in a brief special meeting on August 27, began formal action to annex almost 274 acres of land adjoining the city's present southern boundary east of the Capital Beltway.

Successful completion of the effort will make the condominium community of Hunting Ridge a part of the city. It was Hunting Ridge homeowners who, earlier in August, formally petitioned council for annexation. But council's move also, assuming it succeeds, will bring within the city limits a vast area of undeveloped land some of which (such as the Tidler tract just south of Windsor Green) is already proposed for rezoning and development, and much of the rest of which looks ripe for similar action.

Greenbelt officials and residents have become increasingly alarmed over the past year or more about the development explosion expected in the area proposed for annexation. The alarm has stemmed not only from the adverse impacts that could be foreseen such as greatly increased traffic congestion, but perhaps even more from the realization that the city would have only minimal influence over rezoning decisions affecting that land. With the undeveloped properties being adjacent to but outside the city, as is now the case, an adverse recommendation by city council on proposed rezoning can be defeated by a simple majority vote of the county council (sitting as the District Council). But if the properties are inside the city, then it takes a two-thirds (or "super-majority") vote of the District Council to approve rezoning that city council opposes.

Specific Actions

During its special meeting, council received certifications from city staff that the signatures on the annexation petition met legal minimums set by Maryland law (i.e., constituting at least 25 percent of the registered county voters, and representing ownership of at least 25 percent of the assessed valuation of real property, within the area to be annexed).

Council then heard the first reading of the annexation resolution.

Council also accepted a proposed outline for extension of city services and public facilities to the area to be annexed. (Other than Hunting Ridge, there are only three individual houses within the entire area.) In addition to relatively standard provisions relating to such matters as police protection and use of recreational facilities, the Outline contains detailed provisions as to street maintenance, with emphasis on who would pay what in relation to the planned extension of Hanover Parkway. Hunting Ridge Condominium would not be expected by the city to assume responsibility for the construction of improvements to the part of Hanover Parkway adjacent to that community.

The Outline also would defer liability for real and business personal property taxes within the annexation area until the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1985, or until six months after the annexation effective date, whichever is later.

As its third and final step for the evening, council set Tuesday, October 9, as the date for the required Public Hearing on the annexation proposal.

Although several representatives of Hunting Ridge were present, there were no remarks to council from the small audience during the meeting. It can be expected that owners of undeveloped property within the annexation area will be represented at the Public Hearing.

Jose Morales -- Greenbelt's Outstanding Citizen

by Leta Mach

"Greenbelt is great," declared Jose Morales at the opening ceremonies of the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival as he accepted the recognition due him as one of Greenbelt's greats — the outstanding citizen of 1984.

In his eight years as a Greenbelt resident, Morales has actively participated in many different aspects of the Greenbelt community. As he announced this year's winner, Outstanding Citizen chair Bobbi McCarthy noted, "This year's judges were very impressed with the breadth and depth of the winner's commitment to the residents of Greenbelt. The citizen has truly given to the young and the old and the in-between of this town." For the young he has served as a baseball coach and the Springhill Lake PTA president, for the old he served as president of the Senior Citizen Housing Committee and for the in-between he organized political campaigns and fundraisers for the Cultural Arts Center. For everyone he has served on the city's Community Relations Advisory Board. He has brought hard work, successful organization and enthusiasm to all his activities.

As a resident of Springhill Lake, he revitalized that community's civic association and serves as its president. His activities help ensure that the Springhill Lake community is a real part of Greenbelt, not an apartment complex which could just as easily be located in another city.

While he has held many important posts in the city, it is the little things he does which perhaps best illustrate his humanity. Every Saturday he is busy driving the residents of Green Ridge House to the store so that they may do their shopping. He frequently appears before city council to ask about the city bus which could benefit these residents as well as all Greenbelt. It is appropriate that the city bus that very evening was being used on its first mission—free transportation to and from the Labor Day Festival.

Mayor Gil Weidenfeld recalled his words, "Where's the bus?" as he presented a proclamation from the city. County Councilman Richard Castaldi had a proclamation from the county declaring Morales a "credit to his community and county." On behalf of the state legislative delegation, Delegate Gerard Devlin read a proclamation from Governor Harry Hughes.

The Outstanding Citizen received a plaque from the Labor Day Festival Committee, a dishgarden from Beltway Florists, a complimentary dinner for two from TGI Fridays, a savings bond from the C & P Telephone Company and a Greenbelt is Great T-shirt from the Greenbelt Nursery School. "Greenbelt is Great,—thank you," he said simply.

Wanted: Soccer Uniforms

Sue Cornelius, Greenbelt Soccer Commissioner, in what she describes as a "desperate attempt to recover City and (Soccer) Club property", is trying to locate about 40 soccer uniforms which were issued to players last year and which have not been returned. She emphasized that these uniforms are not gifts to the players as some young players and their parents may believe. The uniforms are $20 shirts and shorts that are to be used during the season and returned for re-use in the next season.

Cornelius issued a plea for the parents of all soccer players to be sure that the uniform worn last season is returned. She estimates that the missing uniforms can outfit at least one team, and in some cases, two teams. Uniforms should be returned to the Boys and Girls Club.

Teen Groups

Greenbelt CARES will be offering Teen Groups beginning on Wednesday, September 19 from 5-6 p.m. Each group will run for six weeks and focus on a specific topic. The topic for the first group will be Substance Use and Abuse: Decision Making—How to Say "No" and Drug/Alcohol Education.

Enjoyable Dance Program

To the Editor:

Those of us who were in the Roosevelt Center Mall audience on August 26 were treated to an exceptionally enjoyable dance program. The Bavarian Austrian Dance Company took us back with their dancing to a village square at dusk with cool breezes sifting through the trees. The music, intricate steps, plus hand, thigh and heel clapping kept us spellbound to the very end when many young and older persons participated in some complicated group dances.

The Greenbelt Recreation Department deserves special credit for bringing the company to us and we hope they will return again and again to lift our spirits.

Greenbelt Swimmers Compete in Bermuda

by Joni Dies

A team consisting of 12 Greenbelt and 21 Adelphi swimmers were the guests of families from Bermuda during the third week of August. Each year the team from Bermuda spends a week in the United States, and then repays their host teams by inviting them to swim in Bermuda the following year. A team from Boston also spent the week in Bermuda.

During the day our youngsters enjoyed the hospitality of the Bermudian swimmers and their families who showed them the lovely sights of this tiny island country. The swimmers frolicked in the sand, splashed in the waves, sailed and snorkled, rode mopeds all over the island, and had a great time.

Although it rained three days, our swimmers' spirits were not dampened as they swam very well during the four evenings of competition. In addition to the regular age-group events, a highlight of the week was a mile-long swim from Trunk Island to the main island of Bermuda. Two hundred twenty seven swimmers completed the event. Nine of our swimmers swam in this event and placed in the following order: Craig Dies (3), Lynda Blue (44), Brian Dies (49), Tara Yaney (57), Teresa Crisman (91), Steffan Sonneveldt (110), Tammy Meyers (111), Kevin Meyers (135), Emily Sonneveldt (151), and Amy Abbott (205). Two other swimmers, Allison Low and Lisa Meetre, did not swim in this event.

During the regular competition several of our swimmers did especially well.

Lynda Blue, 4th; Teresa Crisman, 6th; Craig Dies, 1st (2); 2nd (2), and 3rd; Brian Dies, 6th; Allison Low, 1st (2), 2nd and 3rd; Steffan Sonneveldt, 3rd (3); Tara Yaney, 1st, 2nd, and 3rd (3).

In addition to Craig Dies' placements, he left two Bermuda National Records.

Maryland to Participate In Operation Lifesaver

The National Safety Council recently recognized Maryland as an official participant in the national Operation Lifesaver program to prevent accidents and fatalities at railroad/highway crossings. So far this year three persons in Prince Georges County have been killed in crossing accidents.

"Many drivers fail to realize that a train can't stop suddenly or slow down quickly enough to prevent a collision at a crossing," said Hilmar Christianson, the Maryland coordinator for Operation Lifesaver. "A freight train traveling at 30 mph or a passenger train going 60 mph needs half a mile to stop, even when the emergency brake is applied. A car going 55 mph, however, can stop in 225 feet.

States participating in Operation Lifesaver try to prevent accidents in three ways: by improving crossings and warning device, by enforcing existing laws for traffic at crossings, and by educating the public about the hazards of crossings. Maryland's campaign will also focus on preventing vandalism and trespassing on railroad property.

Operation Lifesaver began with a local program in Idaho in 1972 and has since spread to 42 other states. Idaho fatalities dropped 39 percent during the first year of Operation Lifesaver, and other states have had reductions ranging from 28 to 100 percent.

Anyone wanting to express concern about specific crossings should contact Robert Herstein at the State Highway Administration, 350 South Hammonds Ferry Road, Glen Burnie, Md. 21061 or call 301-859-7493.

EMLER AND ASSOCIATES, P.A., REGISTERED ENGINEERS AND SURVEYORS, AND AS SET FORTH IN THE RESOLUTION; AND FURTHER PROVIDING FOR THE SPECIAL TREATMENT OF PROPERTY IN THE AREA TO BE ANNEXED AS TO RATES OF MUNICIPAL TAXATION BY DEFERRING THE TIME PROPERTY SHALL FIRST BECOME TAXABLE UNTIL THE FISCAL YEAR BEGINNING JULY 1, 1985 OR UNTIL SIX MONTHS AFTER ANNEXATION, WHICHEVER LAST OCCURS.

The location map made part of this public notice depicts the area of annexation, and a detailed description of metes and bounds, as well as the annexation plat, may be reviewed at the City Offices, 25 Crescent Road, Greenbelt, Maryland, Telephone 474-8000 or 474-3870.

The property is being proposed for annexation to the City of Greenbelt, Maryland, under the provisions of Article 23A, Section 19, of the Annotated Code of the State of Maryland. A petition for annexation was received by the City Council at its regular meeting of August 13, 1984. The Mayor of Greenbelt has verified that the petition has met the requirements of the above referenced Section 19 in that it bears the signatures of more than 25% of the registered voters and the owners of more than 25% of the assessed valuation of real property in the area to be annexed.

Said resolution proposes to extend the boundaries of the City of Greenbelt to include the lands and property, as enumerated in its nancial support from C & P Telephone Company of Maryland, Bell Atlantic, AT&T Communications, GTE-Sprint, MCI, and SBS Skyline.

CFA Executive Director Stephen Brobeck explained that "the Hotline is intended to meet the greatest consumer information need in the history of the country. For decades phone service changed very little. Now because of divestiture consumers must make difficult decisions about their 'easy dialing' long distance company, about leasing or purchasing phones, and about phone repairs and service."

CONSIDERING A CHANGE IN RESIDENCE?

There are three key elements to consider:

A) Your needs: things you positively have to have.

B) Your wants: things you'd like to have, but don't necessarily need.

C) Your qualifications:

1) Your initial investment (cash to move in)

2) Your total income (gross yearly income)

3) Your debt service (total indebtedness)

I would like the opportunity to discuss with you how we can combine these three factors to assist you and your family in achieving your housing goals both within Greenbelt and the metropolitan area - of course with no obligation.

Part III: The People Move In

Greenbelt A Look At The Beginnings

by Peter Durantine

(In the third in a five-part series on Greenbelt's beginnings, the first residents move in.)

The Cooperative

"Why shouldn't the American people take half my money from me? I took all of it from them."

—Edward A. Filene

Through a loan of $50,000 by Boston merchant and philanthropist Edward A. Filene, Greenbelt was able to open its commercial center in the middle of town. Filene, who had established a chain of cooperative stores in Massachusetts, agreed to "sponsor" all commercial enterprises in Greenbelt. This was agreed upon with the Department of Agriculture, who allowed Filene to bring his Cooperative Distribution Corporation to Greenbelt, where he would lease the store properties and provide the needed capital to stock and maintain the businesses until the residents could assume control on their own.

Filene's CDC worked on a profit sharing basis with membership open to all residents. Mem-the agreement's lack of fairness to other proprietors. Finally, Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, explained that this policy was part of the whole Greenbelt experiment.

The partnership between CDC and the government continued until 1940, when residents assumed control of the commercial center, paying back the $50,000 loan with $4,398.65 interest.

The Town

"I like to see a man proud of his city, and I like to see him live so that it is proud of him."

—Abraham Lincoln

In the opening days of September 1937, the RA was liquidated and a newly created agency, the Farm Security Administration assumed control of Greenbelt. Headed by Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace, the FSA appointed Roy S. Braden, an employee of the administration, as manager of the town. On the morning of September 30, 1937 the first families arrived in Greenbelt and were given their choice of any of the 57 homes already completed.

Larry and Betty Brosmer, who arose as to the continuation of Filene's project in Greenbelt; who would supervise?

After some discussion it was decided that Herbert Evans, education and public relations vice-president of CDC, would be administrator of the project and that it would continue as scheduled.

The following month, with the Post Office now open, the first letter being sent by the first postmaster to Franklin Roosevelt, the residents held elections for a town council. Of the twelve candidates vying for council seats, five were elected and out of the five came the first mayor of Greenbelt, Louis Bessmer, a United States Public Health clerk. At the same time, Roy Braden was officially declared town manager, volunteering to work for one dollar a year until the town could acquire a treasury large enough to pay his annual salary of $500, which was provided for in the town charter. At the same time, though, Braden was working as community manager, an appointment made by the FSA, who also paid his salary as community manager.

In the opening months of 1938 the residents voted for a health plan entitled the "Cooperative Health Association of Greenbelt." The plan included a health clinic staffed with two physicians, a full corps of nurses, an emergency room, patient rooms, X-ray facilities and a dispensary. The enrollment fee was $5 for individuals and $10 for families with annual fees of $1.50 per person and $2 per family.

The first physician was Dr. James S. Dryden, who only practiced four months before resigning to move to Richmond, where he wanted to continue his practice. Dryden was then followed by Dr. A. Thomas Christenson, known as the "Flying Doctor" because of the medical aid he had brought by plane to ice bound residents of Tangier island in the Chesapeake Bay during the winter of 1935-1936. Christenson was administrator of the health clinic until it had to close in 1942 because of continuous deficits. While the clinic was open, however, Christenson and his assistant, Dr. Francis Threadgill, had handled 645 cases, 161 of which were births.

In 1935, as the plans for Greenbelt were being drawn, the planners had decided not to include the organizing and planning of churches, but rather leave the responsibility to the residents of the community. In planning a church then, the residents listened to six different pastors give six different sermons and after the last sermon was concluded, the residents, with some deliberation, chose Robert Kincheloe as the first pastor of Greenbelt and the Community church.

Although Greenbelt was to be a relatively equal community in all aspect of living, the residents still managed to break up into their own social factions. The residents who had the lowest income were referred to as "snobs" because they looked down on everyone else. Where the higher rent homes were was referred to as "Rum Row" and those who lived in the exhibit homes were considered to be living on "Paradise Lane." But the residents still came together, enlisting in activities that make a community. By the end of 1938, there were thirty-one social clubs listed in Greenbelt.

Of the tens of thousands of bership was obtained by a small fee, giving each member a vote as to the decisions made in the cooperative. It was a democratic institution where profits were shared by both business and patron at the end of the year. To receive a profit, which was a dividend of about 6%, members would turn in their sales receipts for the year and have them totaled. From this total the members would receive their share.

What made this endeavor so provocative was that Filene's corporation was to make no profit from the drug store, which boasted a lunch counter and soda fountain, the self-service grocery store, the barber shop, the theatre, and the gas station which it controlled. Normally both member and corporation shared the profit, but since the project was an experiment, Filene agreed to the no-profit stipulation.

Such an "experiment" was a magnanimous gesture on Filene's part, but competitors complained that the partnership between CDC and the government was unfair to other businesses. What made the partnership so unfair was that part of the agreement made by CDC and the Department of Agriculture prohibited competitors from locating within a half-mile radius of Greenbelt's commercial center for the next ten years.

This was especially upsetting to the National Association of Grocers, who publicly pointed out now live in Hyattsville, were part of the second group of residents to move into Greenbelt, which occurred on October 2, 1937. In Dorothy Lauber's "A Collection of Recollections of Greenbelt Residents and Others," the Brosmer's recall: "There was nothing here at the time, no street lights, nothing, but it was a beautiful place. We had two boys at the time. . . . We are very grateful for being able to live in Greenbelt and we have lots of happy memories. If we had not outgrown our house, we would have stayed."

As the weeks and months followed, people moved into Greenbelt on a daily basis. Roy Braden and his wife, a school teacher who taught at the elementary school, greeted each new resident, showing them around the town and informed them of the rules governing the community. All wash off the line by four in the afternoon during the week and no wash hung on Sundays. All lawns and shrubbery to be maintained or the public works would do it for them, no shooting off guns in town, and no riding bicycles on the sidewalks were just a few of the many rules residents had to conform to.

On Sunday, the third of October, four days after the first family arrived in Greenbelt, Washington newspapers sadly reported the death of Edward A. Filene in Paris. Since he was the founder of CDC, speculation people who visited Greenbelt, a few were well known personalities, of whom some were very influential people in history; Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who, if not emptying fish filled buckets into the new man-made lake, was making inspection tours of the town with his "Brain Trust" Rexford Tugwell; Eleanor Roosevelt, who visited the town to inspect, speak, and make dedications; Fiorello La Guardia, famed mayor of New York City, who after visiting Greenbelt decided he wanted one for his state; Anastasio Somoza, president of Nicaragua; and prize fighter Jack Dempsey, who gave a speech at an athletic club dinner in the elementary school.

One of the stipulations for eligibility to live in Greenbelt was that an individual or family could not make less than $1,500 or more than $2,000 a year. This was to insure that those most in need were selected for residency in the town. In keeping with this stipulation, the town manager had to ask two sisters who were sharing a house together to leave because their combined incomes amounted to $2,500 a year. At times the rules proved to be quite a vexation for many, but they were still enforced and abided by.

By June of 1938, the last of the construction was complete and to crown the event a baby boy arrived in town, Greenbelt's first birth. Ironically, though, nine days later the first death occurred in town when a young boy drowned in the lake. Coincidentally, the following month found the lake closed to swimmers because of a heavy bacteria count that was discovered.

Governed by state and county laws and required to pay state and county taxes, the residents of Greenbelt were given the right to vote in Maryland; it was the fall of '38 and the council elections were held again. This time a woman, Ruth Taylor, was elected to the town council. This marked the first time in Prince Georges County history that a woman served on a town council.

The Way I See It

by Charles F. Schwan Jr.

In one of his last acts as Secretary of Transportation, Lowell Bridwell designated the route of an intercounty highway connector to run from I-270 at Gaithersburg to U.S. 1 just south of Laurel. Thus was written the latest chapter of the 30-year-old saga originally called the "Outer Beltway."

Montgomery County Executive Charles Gilchrist reacted immediately to reject the highway, as well as Bridwell's suggestion that the county use its own funds to purchase the right-of-way. The initial reaction of Prince Georges County officials appeared to support Bridwell's action.

Greenbelt's position, however, on each of the various stages of the nine-lived (or more) highway has been more nearly akin to that of Montgomery County. But plans to extend the intercounty connector to the Spellman (Baltimore - Washington) Parkway and beyond still exist. The City Council would do well to remind the Prince Georges County Executive and the County Council that the city rejects the road in whatever form it takes.

The Transportation Department has persisted in keeping alive the possibility of an intercounty connector despite popular disapproval, local governmental protests and even a demurrer by the legislature. Our county officials should be counseled that, if the road stops short of Route 1, pressure to extend it east to the Parkway will be unnecessary.

If a Car's a Lemon

The 1984 Maryland General Assembly enacted the "Lemon Law Bill" which may entitle some new car buyers to a replacement vehicle or a refund if the car is a lemon and simply cannot be repaired. Delegate Joan Pitkin was co-sponsor of this legislation.

What is a lemon? Initially, the defect in a car must substantially affect the owner's ability to use the vehicle or will reduce the vehicle's value. In addition, the vehicle must be out of service for repair of one or more defects for a cumulative total of thirty (30) days during the warranty period or a single defect is not corrected after a total of four attempts by the dealer or manufacturer to repair it. What does a person do once he has a lemon? Notify the manufacturer immediately by certified mail, enclosing copies of all correspondence. If in fact the car is a lemon, the manufacturer will replace the vehicle with a comparable vehicle or accept return of the vehicle and refund the full purchase price minus a reasonable allowance for use of the vehicle which may not exceed 15 percent of the purchase price.

The important thing to remember is not to waste time. Initiate repairs and proper correspondence promptly. Also be sure to keep meticulous records in case a real fight develops.

The Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office in Baltimore (528-8662) can provide additional information on the Lemon Law Bill. For further assistance call Delegate Pitkin, 858-3104.

Fire & Rescue Review

by Billy Rowland

The G.V.F.D. and RS. responded to 170 fire and rescue emergencies during the month of August. Those calls included 20 motor vehicle accidents involving injury.

Auto Accidents

The most serious auto accidents that occur in the Greenbelt area are usually on the Capital Beltway and on the Baltimore Washington Parkway. One other area that residents should be aware of is on Greenbelt Road in the area of Greenway Shopping Center. We have responded to many serious accidents in the Greenway area and we urge you to be extra cautious when driving in this area.

Pedestrian Accidents

In late July, two men were killed on the Beltway near Kenilworth Avenue as they attempted to assist a disabled motorist. Prior to that, three state highway workers were killed on the Beltway during construction in the Greenbelt area. And last year a Greenbelt resident was killed on Crescent Road after leaving the Center.

It is recommended that if you become disabled on a highway, pull as far to the right as possible and wait for assistance from the police. If you leave your vehicle to do repairs, it is very important to stay well away from the travel portion of the roadway. Raising the hood and turning on hazard lights will also make your situation more evident to other drivers.

And with schools now back in session, we urge all to be extra careful while driving just before and just after classes begin and end. Many more children will be walking to Roosevelt High School this year and this will pose extra hazards.

Bloodmobile

On Saturday, September 1, the Greenbelt Fire Department hosted the Red Cross Bloodmobile. Thirty-eight pints of blood were successfully donated. A special thanks to those who participated and to the News Review and the merchants of Greenway Center for announcing the program.

President Visits Goddard

by Jim Cooley

Did anyone notice the helicopters flying over Greenbelt Thursday morning and noon on August 30? Those helicopters carried President Ronald Reagan, his aides, the press and dignitaries including Maryland Senator Charles Mc Mathias for a visit to the NASA Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt.

Continuing with the space shuttle launch that morning, the visit included tours of exhibits of technology utilization and application (programmable pace maker, new material for fish nets) and a speech on high tech by the President.

In addition to those by Goddard employees, exhibit presentations were given by a Fire Technician of the Prince Georges County Fire Department and two students, Janet Sayre of Eleanor Roosevelt High School and John Plating of Oxon Hill High School, who are preparing a "Get Away Special" package to fly aboard the shuttle next summer.

NASA is also seeking an elementary or secondary school teacher for a 1986 shuttle flight. We would be delighted to report on such a flight for one of the fine members of the teaching profession in Greenbelt

CITY NOTES

The general crew constructed food booths and set up activity booths for the Labor Day Festival. Tables, chairs, stages, etc. were transported to the festival grounds. The crew also completed construction and grading work on the entrance to Attick Park. The area is now ready for planting. A new scoreboard was installed on Braden Field. Trees and brush were trimmed along the walkway to the Gladys Spellman Overpass.

The 1969 Ford School Bus is now back in service after repairs were made by mechanics. Routine maintenance work was done on police cruisers.

The parks crew also cut grass in playgrounds and along roadsides this week. Maintenance work was done on the ballfields and golf courses was completed.

Our Neighbors

Justin Joseph Capretti received a big welcome from Greenbelt relatives when he arrived, weighing 9 lbs. 3 oz., at Prince Georges Memorial Hospital on August 1. Aunts Kathy, Patricia and Rita and uncles Richard and Charles Roland celebrated with maternal grandparents Dick and Pat Roland of 2 Court Plateau Place. Paternal grandparents Sunday and Doris Capretti live in West Hyattsville. To top it off, Justin has a great-aunt: Alice Cave of Parkway. Parents Sue and Don Capretti both work at NASA and live in Seabrook.

The Bennof family of the 8200 block of Canning Terrace are delighting in the August 24 arrival of Jakob William, who weighed 8 lbs. when he was born at home. Jake's sister, Courtney, is 21 months old.

Philip Rodkin, a senior at Eleanor Roosevelt High School and the son of Avril and Larry Rodkin of Westway, experienced an honor recently that is a bit unusual for a teen-ager. He and classmate Janet Sayre and advisor Mrs. Melodyne Garner were invited to present a display on their recent research and experiment at the International Congress of Nematology last month in Canada.

The students are members of the EHRS team whose experiment has been chosen to be on the next space shuttle flight in June of 1985. On the second night of the 5-day congress held near Toronto, the students gave a detailed explanation of their biology experiment before the group of distinguished nematologists from South America, Europe and the United States. They were the Greenbelter Howard Mortman worked as a page in Dallas at the Republican National Convention. His account of the week's events appeared in the August 31 issue of the Prince Georges Sentinel.

Greenbelt's 1983 Citizen of the Year Albert Herling was recently honored as one of 16 Marylanders to receive Volunteers for the Arts Awards from Governor and Mrs. Harry Hughes.

Al is on the Prince Georges Arts Council Board of Trustees and was cited as one of those involved in the founding of the Council. He is also on the Board of the Greenbelt Cultural Arts Center. A piano student at the University of Maryland, Al performed last year at a recital at the AFL-CIO George Meany Center for Labor Studies.

Congratulations to Pvt. David C. Moss, son of Doris J. Moss of 48 Ridge Road. He recently completed the automotive and tactical vehicles maintenance course at the U.S. Army Training Center at Fort Dix, N.J. The course also included instruction in welding and use of other power equipment.

Best wishes for a speedy recovery to Bess Brickman of 45 Court of Ridge Rd. who is recuperating after surgery at Holy Cross Hospital.

I provide in-home service in this neighborhood 3 days each week as well as some evenings and weekends. I'm bonded, licensed and top rated for over 25 years. You can count on my estimates and prompt fair service. I always call before visiting, carry more than 5 times the normal inventory of parts, and can (almost) always repair your Color TV IN YOUR HOME, ON ONE TRIP. I repair HI FI'S and VCR's also. I buy broken color Zenith portables. Call with model and chassis no's. from back of set.

Packaged amount too large for you?

If the packaged amount of meat or produce is too large for you, it may be possible for a staff person to divide it for you. They will try to accommodate you if they can. However, it's not possible evenings and Sundays with meat, since no meat department employees work then.
